VISION PLANNING

We know you did not get married to think one day you would be writing a divorce division plan. In fact it may make you so angry to even be looking at this page. But let us assure you this step is KEY in your divorce journey. There is an old proverb that says, “When there is no vision the people will fail.”

A popular piece of technology is a GPS system. At first it looks complicated to use, but once you take the time to learn how to use the device, it will save so much stress and time. The interesting thing about a GPS is that you cannot just type in where you want to arrive without first having typed in your present location and then where you want your destination to be. Once you have entered the information, you have a roadmap. If only your divorce journey were that simple. VISION PLANNING not only gives you a roadmap to define where you are at the beginning but where you want to be in a period of time. You can then refer to it often to see if you are staying the course.

Grab some coffee and a bit of quiet time for yourself. Maybe drive to the park and sit under a tree with your pages, or some spot that offers you a sense of peace and calmness. The emotional, financial, and physical place you find yourself in right now may be awful, but remember it isn't your ending point. Writing your vision statements is the beginning of getting comfortable with your future.
